

Iman Abdulrazzak is a Syrian violinist from Aleppo. Prior to fleeing the war, Iman received training in her native country in classical music. It was in Syria that Iman unearthed her passion for teaching music. She has taught violin and music theory for the past seven years.

In 2013, Iman relocated to Turkey. During her time there, she volunteered as a music teacher for children in an orphanage.

Iman next moved to the United States in order to complete her undergraduate studies at Monmouth College. She graduated in 2018 with a double major in music and psychology. During her time in the United States, Iman played with several orchestras and was the concertmaster of Monmouth College Orchestra for three years.

In May 2018, Iman arrived in Canada seeking a new start. She joined Nai, a Toronto-based, Syrian children's choir in September 2018 and is currently their conductor. Additionally, Iman is an active member of the Canadian Arabic Orchestra, a registered non-for-profit ensemble whose repertoire bridges Arabic and Western classical genres.
